

TAGESBILDER

The background features a detailed, hand-drawn illustration of a cell. The cell is roughly oval-shaped with a textured outer boundary. Inside, there is a large, dark, circular nucleus with a prominent nucleolus. Surrounding the nucleus are various organelles, including several mitochondria with distinct internal folds (cristae) and a network of endoplasmic reticulum. A large, dark, irregular shape, possibly representing a Golgi apparatus or a lysosome, is positioned near the nucleus. The drawing uses black lines and shading on a light gray background, giving it a scientific yet artistic appearance.
